

In 2019, I will...

	a	b	c
start	listening to a variety of English accents	keeping a list of all my spelling mistakes	a learning journal
remember	that learning a language is a process that takes time and effort	to listen to and ask for feedback from my teacher	that there isn't one 'correct' accent in English practice	doing something in English for 10 minutes every day	new vocabulary as much as possible to commit it to my long-term memory	translating a text from English into my first language and vice versa try	using at least five new items of vocabulary every week	online English classes	to learn the phonemic script make	a list of my common grammar errors and cross them off as I master them	a recording of my speaking to analyse	an effort to use a wide pitch range as this will improve my intonation
take	time to check my writing for mistakes	a look at my previous work in English and evaluate my progress	regular breaks while studying do	plenty of pronunciation practice	consider the role of body language and facial expressions in my interactions	regular speaking practice with a teacher or English-speaking friend enjoy	reflecting on my progress	listening to songs in English	learning some slang and idiomatic expressions
